LETTER FROM THE EDITORS

It was great to see the green shoots of Beverley coming back to life on 15th June with a number of shops opening and more shops and cafes to open from 4th July, to show that Beverley is getting back to the new normal.

No doubt it will take a while for all of us to manage the change, but working together we will get there.

July will be the new transition month as we get use to the outdoors, understand more of what we can and cannot do, so we now look back and reflect on what new skills we have acquired during lock down.

Please send in your stories of lock down and the positive or quirky new skills you have learned.

Have a great July.

Julian.

It's officially summertime readers! That means long sunny evenings and mornings that don't seem so soggy, I can't wait.

Okay let's get reacquainted. Last month was thrilling for me. I learnt something I've always wanted to do but have never had the patience for... I learnt to juggle! And no I'm not talking about throwing two balls up in the air and hoping for the best here, I'm talking about full 3 ball juggling. From 3 oranges to 3 socks, I can't stop picking up random objects that will test my newfound skill.

I have also rekindled my love of reading! For a while now it has felt something of a pained effort, and there always seemed to be something more important that I needed to do (sounds intriguing, but in reality it was just me watching another episode on Netflix). But now I am taking time to balance fiction and non-fiction while I educate myself on important current topics - knowledge is power!

As we go into July and the summer season, the message from the Government remains the same. 'Stay Alert', wash your hands regularly, and keep your distance if you go out. I hope you enjoy this issue.

Olivia.

BEVERLEY REOPEN AND SAFE FOR SHOPPING

With the Government announcing the easing of lockdown for many retailers, we are starting to see more of what the new normal will be like across Beverley.

Given the new green light on shopping, fashion retailers, charity shops, and other non-essential retailers are able to reopen safely.

Shopping centres such as Flemingate have already put impressive plans in action, with a new play area opening early in July encouraging children to explore in a safe environment.

Businesses and shop owners have put the necessary precautions to maintain social distancing and keep everyone safe in the fight to stop the spread of Covid-19, while bringing Beverley back to a bit of normality.

BEVERLEY ART GALLERY CELEBRATES THE 150TH ANNIVERSARY OF THE BIRTH OF LOCAL ARTIST FRED ELWELL

Beverley Art Gallery - although still closed at the moment - is marking the 150th anniversary of the birth of local artist Fred Elwell on Monday, 29 June.

The Gallery features the UK's largest collection of Fred's work. Elwell's paintings are a permanent feature of the Edwardian 'red' gallery, located in the Treasure House in Beverley. The display is altered every year, with loans from both private and public collections.

The collection was recently enriched by several important paintings with support from the Friends of Beverley Art Gallery, and the V&A Purchase Grant Fund.

Beverley Art Gallery curator, Helena Cox, said: "At Beverley Art Gallery, we are dedicated to researching Fred Elwell's work and finding ways of making his varied art relevant in new ways. Although Fred's style can be described as traditionalist, there was a lot of 'quirkiness' in his life; he surely knew how to make the most of his bohemian days in Paris, and he brought great humour into his art, too. Fred was very open to artistic inspirations from abroad, spending every summer he could travelling through Europe and painting its dynamic and diverse landscapes. Here in Beverley, we are really lucky to benefit from the brilliant world-famous research of Professor Tim Barringer of Yale University in the USA, who provided us with exciting exhibition interpretation last year".

It is hoped that visitors will again be able to come and see the Fred Elwell collection from 6 July with appropriate social distancing measures in place in the Art Gallery, located in the Treasure House in Champney Road. Further details will be announced soon. BEVERLEY ENTREPRENEUR FIGHTING FAST FASHION WITH INNOVATIVE COVID-19 BUSTING DRIVE THROUGH SERVICE

A Beverley-based businesswoman who reuses and recycles unwanted and second-hand clothing is appealing for donations to support national charities using an innovative new Covid-19 friendly drive through service.

Daisy Jessop (22) is the brainchild of Envirofriendly Recycling (EMEA) Limited, an ethical clothing recycle business that aims to combat the 'fast fashion' culture by using drop off points to collect unwanted clothing and reduce the amount of items that go to landfill. The company uses proceeds from sales to raise money for the RSPCA and RNLI, as well as other local charitable causes that have been struggling to fundraise during the Covid-19 pandemic.

Daisy said: "Envirofriendly is a concept based on making an environmental, economic and social difference by using ethical business practices in textile reuse. By combining a passion for the environment with commercial good sense, we offer a unique and compelling proposition to charities - where we make a financial contribution to them based on an agreed amount per tonnage of items collected."

Daisy's family have been in the clothing trade for around 30-years and they have a large network of distributors across Europe, the Middle East and Africa - people who pass on clothes to those with the greatest need. Daisy added: "We're appealing to people to bring us their unwanted clothes. Donated items need to be reusable so please don't send anything with holes or that you wouldn't feel comfortable passing on to a friend or relative. If you have been clearing out or spring cleaning during the lockdown period this is an ideal opportunity to make use of our Covid-19 friendly drop off point. Please bring us your clothes and we will put them to good use."

Envirofriendly has recently refurbished its warehouse facility in Beverley creating a Covid-19 friendly drive through/drop off point. The warehouse, which is based at Unit 5, Belprin

FLEXIBLE FURLOUGHING

From 1st July 2020 employers have the flexibility to bring previously furloughed employees back to work part-time - with the government continuing to pay 80% of wages for any of their normal hours they do not work up until the end of August. This flexibility comes a month earlier that previously announced, to help people get back to work.

The employer can decide the hours and shift patterns that employees will work on their return and they will be responsible for paying their wages in full whilst working.

This means that employees can work as much or as little as the employer's business needs, with no minimum time that the staff can be furloughed.

Any working hours arrangement that is agreed with the employee must cover at least one week and be confirmed to the employee in writing.

If the employee is unable to return to work, or the employer does not have work for them to do, they can remain on furlough and the employer can continue to claim the grant in full for their full hours under the existing rules.

If you require any further information on the above then please do not hesitate to contact Lynne Auton on 0845 3082288 or email la@payrollsolutions.org.uk

A THANK YOU FROM THE EDITORS

We would like to thank you for your continued support, for your contributions and for the positive, upbeat attitude that Beverley does so well.

By pulling together and drawing on that community drive we can support each other and be the stronger for it. Keep well, follow the government guidelines, and reach out to others if you need to. With thanks, Julian and Olivia.

Road, Beverley, HU17 0LN (off Swinemoor Lane), has been converted for people to drop off unwanted but reusable clothing items.

Earlier this year, Daisy signed a deal on a new purpose-built textile sorting facility in Beverley. The new 6,000sq ft warehouse also has 1,000sq ft of office space all designed to increase the size of Envirofriendly's operations. The facility serves the company's textile clothing bank operations. HELLO FROM PETS' BEST FRIEND

Things are looking bright on the grooming side with lots of tangle free, well kept dogs thanks to their owners keeping on top of grooming and preventing matting. This has made the job a lot easier from my point of view and even more comfortable for the dog!

This month I will be seeing some of my feline friends for some playful visits and catch ups as it's been months since I've seen them, so I will be very happy when I do!

I have noticed quite a few dogs with very long nails recently. It is important to keep on top of these for the comfort of the dog.

I can do nail appointments alone when needed so get in touch if you're not sure!

A few of my customers have also had some issues regarding the behaviour of their pet.

Certain behaviours can be helped and would benefit the dog hugely in grooming.

For example, it isn't always a dogs favourite time of the month so if we can learn more about how to work with them from a pack leader perspective, we can in turn make the experience more comfortable for them when being groomed.

If owner training is going to be a road you want to explore, I can recommend a fantastic trainer just get in touch!

RAYMAC OPEN FOR BUSINESS

Following the recent Government updates on guidelines for the Coronavirus, Raymac Signs, located in the heart of Beverley, are back open and have COVID Secure safety signs and floor vinyls in stock.

It has become an essential priority for all businesses to keep their customers and staff safe during this pandemic, and to help local businesses in Beverley and nationwide operate safely, Raymac Signs have compiled a tailored collection of COVID signs that will help you navigate around the regulations.

As the lockdown eases and finding effective ways to communicate directions to your customers becomes all the more important, one of the quickest and easiest ways of ensuring your premises follows the guidelines is to display clear and visible signs for those who enter your business premises to read and follow.

Whether it is to let your customers know where to go, where to stand or where to queue and in what direction, vinyl floor stickers and signs are the best option to prevent the spread of the Coronavirus. The signs are digitally printed and laminated to give extra durability.

BROOK TAVERNER: BACK WHERE WE BELONG

It's been a while, but we are overjoyed to back where we belong and welcoming customers to our home at 35 Toll Gavel. The past few months have undoubtedly been difficult for all for numerous reasons, but it truly is magnificent to see some form of normality creeping ever closer.

More than anything else, we've missed the daily interactions and the friendly faces that we were so used to seeing on a daily basis - the past few weeks has seen a more than welcome return to the high street and we'd like to take this opportunity to thank you for your continued loyalty and positive attitudes! If you haven't popped by yet, Lee and the team have done a great job of safety-proofing the store and providing free face masks, hand gel and gloves the risk of virus spread is minimised in every possible way.

We're sure you've heard enough of the ideas around the 'new normal' and the way life is going to be for the next few months, so we thought we would provide an update from a clothes perspective and how fashion choices may alter in reaction to the unexpected change to summer plans.

With our design team being based in the UK, we are lucky enough to understand the unpredictability of the British climate and this insight is held firmly in mind when creating summer garments. It's for exactly this reason that we feature a host of knitwear ranges that are perfect for mild evenings, as well as summer coats and Harrington jackets for the casual look that's equally ready to fight off July downpours - all of which of course provide the perfect complement to our traditional summer collections across polo shirts, casual shirts, shorts and trousers.

Holidays may have been postponed and set aside in favour of the 'Staycation' (traditional holidays stereotypically kept within the UK) so our trousers that are perfect for lovely evening strolls along the beach and our jackets designed for that 5* meal on the last night of a cruise cruise may well be repurposed for glamping trips to the Cotswolds or the Beacons, or family dinners in countryside AirBnBs... No matter to location or vacation, we're confident that they will be put to good use.

For the hardcore campers who will flock to the British countryside will find that the Sizergh knits and Stowe trousers in particular will more than adequately fulfil the role of Summer Staple-piece - as always if you have any questions about the weight of our garments or what occasions they would be perfect for, then please do ask any member of staff in our Brook Taverner store.

If we were to provide one piece of menswear insider knowledge for the rest of this unique summer season, it's the recommendation to peruse our range of half-lined and casual jackets. More than ever we are seeing the need for jacket ranges that allow the wearer to throw it off and on at a moment's notice - whether it be thrown off as the sun peaks through the clouds only to be put back on as dinner is served and off again for after-meal activities, our casual jacket range more than suits the bill. Whether it be the knitted Studley for true versatility or the Chirk jacket - available in three stunning colourways and a stunning washed cotton fabric, please do pop by and attest to our claims for quality yourself!

SALT THERAPY WITH SALT REVIVE

Did you know that 1 in 5 people in the UK suffers from a respiratory illness? That could be asthma, COPD or another long-term condition.

Salt therapy is a 100% natural treatment that could help improve your lung health and allow you to breathe easier, naturally.

So how does it work? Salt therapy helps to maintain good respiratory system hygiene by clearing clogged airways and reducing inflammation.

The American Lung Association Chief Medical Officer stated that inhaled salt could thin mucus in the airways, making it easier to expel. Salt can also kill microbes in the lungs and reduce the risk of infections, due to its antibacterial and antiviral properties.

An asthma attack occurs when your airways inflame - making it difficult to carry oxygen to your lungs. This results in asthma symptoms of coughing, chest tightness, wheezing and shortness of breath.

Salt is also naturally anti-inflammatory and can help to ease these symptoms.

The owner, Clare, came across salt therapy in London 3 years ago when it was suggested she try it to help ease her breathlessness due to her asthma and the 5th chest infection of that year she was coming down with.

Clare was so amazed at how much better she felt after just one session that she and her husband decided to open the only salt therapy centre in Yorkshire.

Following a 14 week closure due to Covid-19, Salt Revive will be re-opening their doors from Saturday 4th July with lots of changes to ensure the safety of visitors, including reduced capacity, enhanced rigorous cleaning procedures and social distancing in place.

With separate adult and family salt rooms, the therapy is suitable from 6 months and prices start from just £14 a session.

To find out if salt therapy could help you, call them now for a free consultation on 01482 679453.

WALK BACK TO HEALTH

Summer Rain on Highgate

As I write, in the second week of June, lockdown is easing and many of us are starting to think of how best we can safely resume our lives. Can I suggest to all readers, who are fortunate enough to still be able to do so, to put some strolls on your post-pandemic to-do list

We are fortunate that in and around our marvellous town and surrounding countryside, we have many fine places to stroll. Ours are not dramatic landscapes, no towering peaks or rushing rivers, few will get tired by a saunter south from Walkington, or a wander along the former rail track.

I offer you the outline of 3 very easy walks, none more than 5 miles from the Minster - all doable in a couple of hours or less - all pretty much guaranteed to make you feel that bit better. Alongside each walk, I will add a, hopefully profound, quote about the benefits of walking on for body and mind. Detailed maps can be found and printed out for free, at bjg.com/maps.

1 A SAUNTER SOUTH FROM WALKINGTON

This is a cracker of a summer stroll, no more than 3 gently rolling miles, yet full of natural and historic interest. Start on East End, just across the road from the Dog and Duck, head up lovely Church Walk, passing a wonderful nature areas, now full of wild flowers. You may see some Shetland ponies by the beautifully sited church. Take the clear footpath behind the churchyard, go left, very soon right, to head south down a fine dry valley - so typical of our Wolds. At a stile, go right to access a clear farm track that heads south from Risby Park Farm. In glorious May sunshine the route felt as good as Provence!

At the quiet road go left, passing the information board about a lost mansion and garden. Now head down the track to the fantastic Folly Lakes, the cafe here is excellent and now open after lockdown. Return back to the road, go left and soon left again down a foot path alongside a plantation. This takes you back to Risby Park Farm, passing a smashing pond and earthworks of a hunting lodge, where Henry V111 visited in 1541.

Recent research by our own magnificent local historian, Barbara English, suggests Henry lived up to his reputation for prodigious consumption on this sojourn in

Along the track...

East Yorkshire. From the farm, it is a simple walk back to the village along the quiet farm road. With a good shop and the prospect of the pubs offering limited service, you might end your stroll at the benches by the fine village pond, with a little refreshment.

"WALKING IS THE BEST MEDICINE" (HIPPOCRATES)

2 ALONG THE TRACK, TO CHERRY AND BACK

A fine 4 mile circuit, following the Hudson Way, along the old Beverley to York railway, then returning to town using the wide cycle path that runs alongside the main road.

Access the route just over the by pass footbridge, there are parking areas on both sides. Former rail routes are perfect for those who prefer flat terrain and also for lovers of wildlife, as the flora and fauna, especially in summer, are a real tonic.

After two gentle miles you arrive at the substantial former Cherry Burton station - it closed in the year I was born, yet still has its platforms. Go down the steps and walk carefully into lovely Cherry Burton village. The massive stretch of old walls by the church are very handsome. Cherry, like nearby Walkington, is blessed with a well-stocked shop and in the Bay Horse, a fine pub. A good pond too, where you can relax, before strolling back to town along the convenient cycle path that runs on the left side of the road. This ends at the Molescroft roundabout, from where you can easily saunter back to the start.

HERE TO GET you THERE

I love these old rail routes - there are 4 other fine ones in the Riding - so evocative of the past that I can almost hear the hiss of steam. You may have spotted in the media that there is growing talk of restoring this direct rail route to York. I suspect I will have to live for many more years to witness this ambitious plan, come to fruition though.

🕒 PEEPING INTO OUR PAST

Beverley is blessed with many fine and beautiful doorways. This very short walk in the Minster area, takes us past many of them with the enticing prospect of peeping into our rich heritage. There is no finer place to start than at the striking north porch of the Minster, which by now may well have reopened for individual visitors. If so, I shall be among the first to go. I have so missed this haven of beauty, peace and enduring spirituality, that so defines our town. The north porch is an architectural feast, only a reading of the Pevsner guide can do it full justice, suffice to say, that the sweeping stone tracery of the ogee hood, echoes that of the masterpiece of medieval masonry: the Percy Tomb, inside.

From here, head round to see the main entrance beneath the glorious twin towers. When open, which is all too rarely I feel, they afford such a magnificent view along the nave. 23 years ago I got to walk in and out - when getting married - I have never experienced such a rewarding walk, before or since. The Minster has other, lesser-known, now little-used, doorways - walk around the building to enjoy these quite stunning features.

Head onto Eastgate, in the vicarage wall, witness a re-sited handsome brick doorway, it once formed part of the nearby Dominican Friary complex, so cruelly dissolved by the aforementioned Henry V111, in an arguably unsurpassed act of cultural vandalism. To see more doorways at the Friary, head down Friary Lane to the Youth Hostel. In the grounds, you can see 2 more fine doorway arches, the 15th century stone one is most attractive and surrounded by lovely flowers in summer. Return to Eastgate and walk up to Wednesday Market, turn twice left, into splendid Highgate. The stroll back to your starting point reveals so many striking and varied doorways. At number 2, for example, designed by the noted architect William Middleton, we see a handsome Georgian doorcase of the house where the early feminist Mary Wollstonecraft lived.

On your left is the tunnel entrance to our grand Monks Walk pub, which has within one the oldest domestic interiors anywhere in England. On your right, is the parish office, through its door once walked hundreds of Beverley boys and their masters, as this in the eighteenth century was Bluecoat School. See if the delectable Quiet Garden to its rear, has also reopened, what a delight!

VOICES - A POEM BY AMANDA HUGGINS

Back from the capital and your fancy crowd, you make shy bogmen of us at Friday supper, turn us into cloth cap cousins, our voices flat and dull.

Yet Saturday rubs away your strangers' vowels, swaps something for nothing for owt for nowt,
those southern exclamations for ee by gum, and by Sunday you're our Yorkshire lad again,
as though you'd never stepped south of Leeds.

Amanda Huggins is the author of four collections of short fiction and poetry. She was a runner-up in the Costa Short Story Award 2018.

Her poetry chapbook, The Collective Nouns for Birds won the 2020 Saboteur Award for Best Poetry Pamphlet and can be purchased: <https://maytreepress.co.uk/shop-poetry-book/>

LOCKDOWN ROMANCE - A SHORT STORY BY PAULINE KIRK

The dog bounded towards them. "Eustace!" a young man called.

Ellie giggled. A big lolloping Labrador called Eustace? Then she gasped as she was nearly pulled off her feet. "Heel!" she ordered vainly. The two dogs were determined to meet. She let them greet each other, while keeping her distance from the other owner. "Sorry," he apologised. "You obviously have a femme fatale." A man who called his dog Eustace couldn't be bad Ellie decided. "I do believe the lady's flirting," she agreed. "What's her name?"

"Priscilla." Ellie saw him suppress a smile. "Priscilla the poodle. It sort of went together."

"She's hardly miniature," the young man remarked drily.

"No - more like a curly donkey," Ellie admitted. "Poor love, she was abandoned when she was a puppy. Probably growing too big."

"So she's a rescue dog too? This one was found wandering the streets. The RSPCA reckoned he'd probably been dumped by an illegal puppy farm nearby. He's a pedigree but not perfect."

"Like me," Ellie wanted to joke but thought better of it. "I'd better get back," she said instead. Retrieving her dog, she smiled and walked on. The next day, Ellie decided to take the left-hand path through the woods. She felt oddly embarrassed at the thought of meeting the young man again. Priscilla had other ideas, flatly refusing to take the new path.

"Alright," Ellie agreed. "But behave yourself if we do see them again." They were almost out of the woods when a familiar hound bounded towards them. It was impossible to socially distance on so narrow a path, so Ellie stepped aside, into a patch of nettles. Crossly she rubbed at her shin.

"Sorry again," the young man apologised ruefully. "Are you ok?" Straightening up, Ellie nodded. He really was rather good looking. "Here, have a dock leaf," he offered, placing a leaf on a bush between them. "I'll spray it with hand sanitiser if you like."

The absurdity of the situation made Ellie laugh - the first time she had laughed in days. "They do seem to get on," she remarked, nodding towards the two dogs, by now chasing each other round the field next to the woods. "I'll swear Priscilla brought me this way deliberately."

"Eustace insisted we come. It looks like we'd better choose this way tomorrow too." They called their dogs and put their leads back onto their collars. "Same time tomorrow?" the man asked quietly, looking up at her. "It's my lunch break. I'm working from home."

"Me too," Ellie agreed. He was almost around the curve in the path before she plucked up courage. "You didn't say your name," she called. "I can't call you Mr Eustace."

"Ben. What's yours?"

"Ellie."

"See you tomorrow!" Then he and the Labrador were gone. Ellie fondled her dog's ears. "You old match maker!" she teased.

IT'S NOT ALL DOOM AND GLOOM! HERE ARE SOME UNEXPECTED POSITIVES THAT CAME OUT OF THE PANDEMIC

As the lockdown measures are starting to lift in the UK and more businesses are able to reopen, we are going to get a glimpse of what the social distancing life will be like for the foreseeable future. Despite the tragic negatives caused by the pandemic, it has brought about many unexpected positives. Here are some things worth celebrating.

Learning new skills

We've been in lockdown March, and people of all ages have emerged from the other side with a range of new skills. Many companies have released a huge volume of free tutorials, apps and online resources which has meant people have been able to teach themselves new skills. Whether it's dabbling in a bit of sign language, taking up photography, learning to bake and cook new things, drawing, giving yoga a go and more, there's been something new for everyone.

Family time

Spending more time at home has encouraged families to come together, whether it's to learn new skills, a way to bring exercise into the home to keep fit, playing games, catching up with relatives and friends via Zoom, having more family conversations and going out together in the fresh air, it's been lovely to see.

Making us better neighbours

Lockdown has without a doubt brought people from all walks of life together. Whole neighbourhoods and communities, who once didn't know next doors' names, have started talking to each other. Although that's mainly because, well what else was there to do? With many areas heavily populated by those who are older and poorer, the nation has seen a huge surge in volunteer effort to combat the coronavirus threat. Now that's definitely something positive to come out of the pandemic.

New working environments

To keep businesses afloat during lockdown, companies have adapted and encouraged people to work from home where possible.

This now opens up a new and safe working environment that can cut costs. Employees can master new software and link up with colleagues through technology rather than travelling, saving time and money.

DISCOVERING AND REDISCOVERING NEW TALENTS IN LOCKDOWN

JULIAN: Over the past 3 months we all have had to come to terms with spending more time at home, finding out how to deal with not going out and perhaps learn a new skill, game or socialising more indoors with the family rather than spend hours and hours in front of the TV or laptop.

Whilst at home, I re-discovered a bit of the passion to paint, this allowed me time to relax, switch off and express some of my artistic skills!!!

This I hope to do more of as we move more through the Summer into Autumn.

I have enjoyed time with the family, playing card games, watching family films, reading the odd book or two which I never seem to have time to do usually.

Along with going out together for walks and exploring the local network of Public Footpaths and cycle routes. All of the above have been fantastic for both physical and mental health and that inspirational "What's next" to do attitude. Whatever you have learnt during lockdown, whilst it isn't always easy, try to have time for yourself. Hope you like the picture.

Stay safe, stay healthy.

OLIVIA: For me, the past 4 months of lockdown have been about doing things that make me happy. During the early days of lockdown, being stuck inside all day, unable to see friends and family, cancelling all the plans I had, rebooking all the musicals I was seeing... things started to look drab.

I felt sad, but I was okay. Most of my friends however, were feeling trapped and confined by the four walls around them.

I think that's why, to avoid those feelings, I started taking my mind off the things I can't do and focused more on the things I can do.

Out of the context of school and exam pressure, I love learning. I think it's one of the greatest things actually, the fact that we can leave school and still learn throughout the whole of our lives. That we can do this is a privilege, so I say let's take advantage of it.

Last month I conquered my lifelong, but I've never had the time to do it before, goal of 3 ball juggling. It's incredibly addictive. Newly confident in the art, I attempted 4 balls, but turns out that's a whole different technique I will have to practice.

My next endeavour is going to be learning a bit of conversational British Sign Language (BSL).

To encourage people stuck at home to learn, many online platforms such as the official BSL website significantly reduced their standard membership price... so I enrolled!

The 20 hour, CPD certified course can be studied at my own pace, and it's a comprehensive introduction to BSL.

Why not join me? You never know when you will need it and have a positive impact on someone's day.

TMX CELEBRATES 4 YEARS OF BUSINESS IN BEVERLEY

TMX Clothing Supplies, a promotional work wear company now located on Annie Reed Road in Beverley, is belatedly celebrating 4 years of success in business despite its anniversary being marked in lockdown.

Ian Pollard set up TMX in his own garage back in March 2016, with a view of supplying businesses, schools, sports clubs with promotional and personalised clothing.

Looking for continued growth for TMX following initial success, Mr Pollard invested in new equipment and a wider product range to meet the requirements of his growing customer base.

Little did he know that 4 years later he would be operating his business from a double unit in an industrial estate after huge growth and support from those customers. Having spent time in lockdown to reflect on how TMX has grown, Mr Pollard is now making plans for the future and post-Covid-19.

Now hoping to increase and improve his work ware offering over the coming months, Mr Pollard is expanding TMX to attract more schools, clubs and businesses to his client base, while continuing to provide the excellent service offering.

If you are looking for embroidered or printed Workwear, School Uniform, Teamwear and more, get in touch with TMX on Annie Reed Road by emailing info@tmxclothingsupplies or by calling 01482 872817.

COUNTRYSIDE MATTERS WITH SAM WALTON

We are certainly living in strange times with this lockdown because of Corona.

Many different businesses and jobs have been very badly affected and many will take a long time to recover, others may not do so. Farming has not been exempt either as I am sure most people will have heard about the milk crisis due to cafes and coffee shops etc closing, where some milk producers have had to tip their milk down the drain as no-one would take it without a market for it, whilst others were paid 10p per litre under the production costs and then not being paid even that for two months.

You cannot just not milk cows, it would be cruel to do so. That all occurred at the same time as the new grass growth where cows were turned out onto this lush grass and that is what makes cows milk as intended by nature. We all see sheep in fields with their lambs running with them and in May time you would expect to see the ewes being clipped or sheared of their wool. Shearing is a specialist job and usually teams of shearers arrive from New Zealand and Australia to assist us to do that job.

Not so this year and some of the shearers from UK who go to NZ are quarantined also so can't get back home. I was taught how to shear an ewe when I was seven years old, with hand clippers. I could not do it now nor do I guess could many farmers with small flocks as very modern specific machinery is used, and the experts can do several hundred sheep a day. Wool is an important product and I am sure we all wear some items containing wool. So you might think if you can't get someone to clip your sheep, just don't bother, well that would not work either as the ewe would probably get maggots in her wool and it would drop off bit by bit and probably choke other animals and the ewe would be very uncomfortable too.

Most of you will know that a huge range of vegetables are grown in UK and usually Eastern Europeans come over and are willing to do the hard work but again these have been restricted so much of the crops will be wasted. Several farmers have tried using UK labour where several people who have been furloughed answered the request but after a couple of days they quit as it was too hard work. So if you become short of milk, wool and vegetables, all of which I am sure we take for granted please don't blame our farmers!

I'VE BEEN THINKING... SAYS COLIN RAYNOR

The one thing we have all been asking for in the past few weeks from all the experts and political leaders has been clear thinking and policy guidelines, which, although we may not agree with, are in plain English that we can understand.

Something like this from Alan Greenspan, who is an American economics expert and has, over many years, advised a number of Presidents and political leaders of the United State Senate. "You may think you understand what you thought I said, but what you do not understand is that what I said is not what I really meant".

How many of you have already read that twice? Why? It is in good plain English. It contains no difficult words or jargon of any kind. It is one sentence of twenty seven words and contains but one comma. It is, I accept, confusing on first reading but if you read it again, slowly, you realise that the writer is confessing to telling us all an untruth. We may have grasped one idea but the writer says he really meant to tell you something else. Before we become even more confused, let's move on. The point of me bringing Mr Greenspan's sentence to you (which I believe has been around for many years) is to emphasise how important it is to use words carefully. It does not matter if the words come from a world leader or your next door neighbour. If they praise or condemn, their message is done and also all who hear, or read the words, will interpret them in their own way.

In a local paper recently I came across an article which highlighted one aspect of the recent lockdown which is a cause for concern. The article was about the rise in domestic abuse during this period when adults are spending more time together than they have done for many years and this closeness has exacerbated life for many and made home life intolerable. As a social worker for many years I can say categorically, abuse of this kind is the most elusive of situations to offer help to in any way. One thing I know for certain is the abuser seeks total control over his or her partner and will go to any lengths to maintain that control.

The article I read explained how a local supermarket was working with a charity who seek to support victims of domestic abuse. The store was offering designated safe space so those needing help who could talk with trained people for the particular help they need. An excellent idea and another example of how the community, in these strange times is looking to help vulnerable people. So why am I concerned? The article stated a routine act such as shopping was unlikely to alert an abuser. But an abused person will tell you their every movement is monitored and so by giving the name of the supermarket negates the safe space. To achieve this type of help a little bit of deviousness is necessary. Remember our friend Mr Greenspan. I feel sure he could have speed the message in such a way that you understood what he was saying but also that he was really saying something else.

THE SHOW MUST GO ON...LINE (FOR NOW)

East Riding Theatre's Company in Residence, She Productions, have adapted their festival She Fest into a digital format this July, creating a platform to champion local female-identifying talent.

She Productions will flood their website with workshops, live portrait classes, virtual art exhibitions & mini markets, cabaret evenings, family days & discussions (4-25 July) with She Fest Digital 2020.

After launching the festival last year where East Riding Theatre was 'hostess' to art exhibitions, markets, comedy & more, this year's plans were halted along with the rest of the world 12 weeks ago.

However, with some Emergency funding support from Arts Council England, She Productions have managed to collate an equally vibrant & varied programme that you can enjoy from the comfort of your own home.

She Productions' company member Annie Kirkman says: "Sadly, theatre freelancers & artists are having a really tough time right now, as are many industries. We don't know what our future will look like & we have to each find our own way of coping with that. As a company, we decided to keep moving forward with our plans for 2020 but making tweaks & changes along the way so that our work can be enjoyed online.

"We can't compete with digital artists, & we would never try to, but we have been lucky enough to receive some financial support & we want to use this to continue elevating & employing as many other female-identifying artists along the way as possible. As well as those participating in She Fest, we are thrilled to be working in partnership with the University of Hull through their Internship programme & we have hired a 2nd Digital Design student, Abby Quirk, to work with us for 8 weeks. She is already a brilliant addition to the team & we are so grateful to be able to offer this opportunity."

Performance Historian Hollyzone History's returns with her informal theatrical lectures, Yas Queens! & Go Go Girl Pirates! (for kids) , & every Saturday the She Productions' team will host a 'Shevening' with 4 different cabaret acts each night including pole dancer India Alton, Burlesque & Aerial Artist Roxie Royale, singer-songwriter Grace Christiansen, comedy duo Norris & Parker & many more.

Lois Mills, stand-up comedian & Shevening performer says: "Us lasses need to support one another so this festival and this company are a breath of fresh air. In a male-dominated industry, I am proud to be representing the ladies of comedy."

Events will be a mixture of live-streamed, recorded from the artists' homes & even a few special performances filmed from the East Riding Theatre stage.

At a time when the future of theatre is uncertain, She Fest Digital strives to provide some hope during this (rather long) 'interval' away from live theatre, as we work towards raising the curtain once again.

CLASSIC CARS WITH CARFAN - THE CITROEN 2CV

This edition we are looking at a car that could easily be described as quirky, alternative and weird amongst many others - it's the Citroen 2cv, once common on our roads but now becoming quite a rarity.

One of the aims of the car was that it should be capable of driving across a ploughed field with a basket of eggs on the seat without any of them breaking. Amazingly enough, there are various clips available online showing just how successful this cute little car is at achieving just that. Only the French could have such a criterion for a car.

2cv stands for deux chevaux in French and is generally translated as 2 horsepower and anyone who has had the pleasure of travelling in one will appreciate this moniker as it certainly will never break any speed records.

Manufactured from 1948 right up to 1990 the first models had all of 375ccs with the final ones increasing to 602cc. If you don't like body roll in a car, this one is not for you as it is virtually impossible to topple one over although passengers may well be wishing that there was a grab handle if the driver is pressing on. The featured car left the Paris factory in 1986 and it was also made in Argentina, Portugal, Chile and surprisingly, Britain too.

If you fancy a 2cv on your drive, there are certainly a lot for sale and expect to pay anything from a couple of thousand pounds up to twenty three thousand for an immaculate and fully restored version. It all depends on how prepared you are to get your hands dirty with regard to restoration, or not.

So don't forget, should you see a 2cv coming towards you at an apparently scary angle, don't worry, just give it a cheery Carfan wave!

PRACTICAL MOTORING WITH RICH HAYES - PREPARE YOUR CAR FOR THE SUMMER, BOOK AIRCON REGAS NOW

Summer is here and now that lockdown is easing, most of us will be using our cars a lot more often. One thing that can give us discomfort when driving is the heat. The majority of car drivers will be expecting their air con to work as powerfully as normal, but when our British weather reaches extreme temperatures and the warm air comes out of the vents on a particularly hot summers day instead of cool air, it's a pain.

If your air conditioning stops working during the summer months, the usual issues with it can be resolved quickly and easily with an Aircon Regas. Over time, your air con system won't perform as well as it did when it was new, but that's down to needing regular maintenance.

Have you ever forgotten to service your car's air con? That makes most of us! Fortunately, it isn't an expensive or difficult job to keep your air-con working. At Beverley Motor Works, we have all the capabilities and solutions to resolve your air conditioning troubles this summer.

Aircon regassing is the process of removing the old refrigerant gas from your air conditioning system and replacing it with new refrigerant, so your air con can run cold again. It should be the first thing you explore if your air-con system isn't blowing as cold as it should. The process should take no longer than an hour to complete.

Of course, there could be other reasons why your air-con isn't blowing cold anymore, but our trained technicians will advise on what may be the issue at the time.

Prepare your car for the summer and book your Aircon Regas by calling 01482 881128 or booking online today www.beverleymotorworks.co.uk

CYCLING WITH WILSONS WHEELS - CYCLING INTO THE SUMMER

The Government have recently announced they are looking to encourage people to use their bikes more frequently in the build up to summer, and are investing in cycleways to ensure safer cycling.

A £2 billion package has been announced that will create a new era for cycling as alternate methods of travel, including walking, to relieve the pressure on public transport.

This package means it is the largest ever boost for cyclists. There will be new introductions of emergency bike lanes to help support the transport network, and trials of rental e-scooters are being brought forward to increase green transport options.

Following the unprecedented levels of cycling across the UK during the pandemic, the plans will help encourage more people to choose this alternative to public transport when they need to travel, making healthier habits easier.

If you are thinking about getting your bike out and having a ride around this summer, make sure you get your bike checked over first. It needs to be fit for purpose to avoid any problems on the roads or cycle tracks.

You should clean it to remove grime and ensure it runs smoothly, then set the bike to suit you, checking its saddle height to avoid discomfort. Lubricate the chain if necessary, making sure to check the brakes for adjustments and if the tyres need pumping.

When out on your bike, wear light clothing that is bright. You must also wear the appropriate gear, which covers a helmet, gloves, and if you know it is going to be hot, wear sunglasses and apply plenty of suncream. When you set off for your bike ride, start slow and make sure to take a drink.

If you're thinking about Cycle training, email road.safety.training@eastriding.gov.uk for further information.

WHAT IS THE DAY IN THE LIFE OF A CHOCOLATIER AT WHITE RABBIT

Now this is a question that gets asked very often, and I think people expect that the life of a chocolatier is a bit like a dream, and it is many people's dream jobs! Of course, the reality is not quite the same as the romantic image conjured by films like 'Chocolat' although it certainly does come with it's own perks.

Firstly, and I have to say this, I am a chocolate expert, yes, but I am not a chocolatier. I love chocolate, and my Mum was a chocolatier, but the skill I brought to the table was more the business development side rather than the creation side. Being a chocolatier is hard work. It is cerebral, physical, and incredibly messy, and requires a lot of patience to be able to juggle all these things. I much prefer giving my two cents, tasting the creations to make sure they are up to scratch, and to bring those products to market within the framework of White Rabbit. I work closely with our chocolatiers throughout the creation process, and over the years have learned all the theory behind chocolate making, but as I like to tell people: 'I'm not much good at making chocolate, all I can make is a bit of a mess...'

The day of a chocolatier starts with tempering the chocolate. As I have mentioned in previous ask the experts, chocolate actually has a crystal molecular structure and, a bit like steel or glass, must be tempered (the process of heating and cooling to specific temperatures) before it can be worked with. This normally takes a couple of hours, and a couple of hundred stirs of a spoon to work the milk, dark and white chocolates into their tempered form. During this time, our chocolatiers can often get the boring bits done; stock takes, ordering, replying to emails and sorting through special requests needs to be done every single day to keep the operation flowing and to make sure nothing gets missed. It's a bit like spinning a plates, since stock levels change in often unpredictable ways and a special request or wholesale order can come through any day it is impossible to plan too far into the future, so instead there is an element of taking each day as it comes. If you concentrate too hard on keeping the shop stocked you might run out of chocolate, or if you're forever stock-taking and ordering you might miss a special request (which are very often time-sensitive), so it is important for a chocolatier to take a little time to gather their thoughts and prepare each day.

Once the chocolate machines are ready and the chocolatier has a plan for the day they can start to create their wonderful products. This is the fun bit, and the part of the job the food artists enjoy. There are so many skills to master in the kitchen, from patisserie skills like making a ganache (the gooey inside of a truffle) to artistic skills like chocolate calligraphy (writing in chocolate). Chocolatiers need to practice and to innovate. They think about their products, how to make them and the most efficient way from kitchen to counter. Chocolatiers also need to think about flavour, and taste lots of different chocolates and ingredients to 'flavour match' the component parts and make the most delicious products.

Chocolatiering is a batch process, so we are confined to the number of moulds we have and the space in the fridge to turn products around. Some items, like our Chocolate Cats, can only be made 12 at a time so need to be turned around several times to fulfil a batch. Other products, like the chocolate truffles, get made 200 at a time, or our famous chocolate bombs require 8 batch processes before they are done. You can imagine that as more and more chocolatiers join the kitchen this becomes quite a complicated dance for each person to complete their work. Chocolatiers do sometimes work in teams a bit like a conveyor belt, often with hours spent together completing long, tedious and monotonous tasks, so they make friends and they have their own music on to keep them entertained. And of course, a chocolate snack break is never off the cards!

Once the crafting has been done for the day it's time for the clean down. This means, in order to be ready for the next day, the chocolatiers need to be done 1-2 hours before close. Melted chocolate is one of the messiest substances, it sticks, stains and has a high oil content, which all make it very difficult to wash. Each piece of equipment, surface and machine needs to be washed every day, as well as the floor and even the sink itself. This is the bit I really don't envy in a chocolatier and stay well away from! As I say, Chocolate is much easier to eat than it is to make!

OUTDOOR SOCKETS MAKE SUMMER JOBS EASIER!

We've all blinked and suddenly 4 months of lockdown have gone by and now summer is here!

With the easing of lockdown on everybody's minds, now is the time to start thinking about getting back involved in outdoor activities and looking forward to spending time in the garden soaking up the summer sunshine.

In preparation for the jobs ahead of us this summer - tidying the garden, starting the lawnmower, maybe even power washing your paths, and generally getting everything in order, outdoor power sockets are a must.

An outdoor socket, which should be protected by an RCD unit, makes working with outdoor electrical equipment simple and safe to use, and much more so than using internal sockets. It's not only cleaner, but there will be no more dirty flexes poking through a window to an internal socket!

Housing outdoor sockets in a weatherproof box is essential and will reduce any damage to the socket that's caused by those days full of rain or dust. By not taking these precautions you could run the risk of malfunction and a potential fire. Loose wires are a big cause fires.

IN THE GARDEN... JULY

Welcome to July, a lovely month in the garden - all the hard work has been done earlier in the season, so sit back and enjoy the 'fruits of your labour'. Colour and fragrance in borders and containers are found in abundance during July, the list of plants could be endless, and my firm favourites are roses, sweet peas and lavender.

Tasks for July, maintain the status quo...

- Prune shrubs that have flowered and feed them.
- Continue to mow the lawn, in dry spells don't cut it so often, raise the blades on the mower and leave the clippings on the lawn, all this will help retain moisture. I know we all like a lovely green lawn but watering your lawn is not necessary. When rain does fall, the grass will spring back and look lush again almost instantly. If we do have a long dry spell spike the lawn with a garden fork, this will allow the water to enter the soil more easily when rain does fall.
- Water containers every day in hot weather - this is best done early in the morning or in the cool of the evening. Hanging baskets will need a good soak - don't be fooled by the fact we have had rain, often baskets are sheltered from the rain by the wall they are attached to. You can also reduce the frequency of watering by using larger planters.
- Water borders if necessary, then mulch. Most established trees and shrubs will survive quite long spells of dry, hot weather. But water any newly planted shrubs and trees - give them a good soaking, it's better to give a few a good soak in rotation than all of them a little water each day.
- Clear excess pondweed - and top up the water if necessary.
- Dead-head like a demon - do this religiously. 'Dead heading' is removing/cutting off any flowers that have faded or lost their petals; it encourages more flowers to form and prevents flowers from setting seed too early.
- Prune and train cordon, espalier and fan trained fruit trees.

Some extra tips...

Deadhead and feed roses to prolong flowering - deadhead by pruning back to a bud in a leaf axel (joint) lower down the stem and feed with a 'rose fertilizer' or one which is high in potash (K on the label).

Combat Diseases - in the main there are three; all fungal diseases. Blackspot and Rust occur in damp weather, spray as soon as you can with a fungicide, collect up and burn any infected and fallen leaves (don't compost them as you will spread the spores all around the garden). Rust is also an indication the plant is deficient in potash. Mildew will strike when plants are under stress due to lack of water - so keep plants well-watered and spray with a fungicide.

Prune Wisteria - Do you struggle to get yours to flower well? If so follow these four steps:

1. Over the next few weeks cut back nearly all the long shoots to about 15-25cm/6-10ins from the main stem. Lightly prune any stems needed to fill in the main framework.
2. Climbing plants flower better when the flow of sap is slowed down by training the stems horizontally - train them to wires or trellis.
3. The shoots you have pruned in the summer will need pruning again in winter (back to three buds from their base).
4. Ensure the soil around the roots is moist - if needs be apply a mulch and a slow release fertiliser.

That's all for this month, enjoy your gardens.
