OCTOBER LETTER FROM THE EDITORS

Whilst Autumn is the season for change, we did not anticipate the change that would occur with the passing of our Queen, Queen Elizabeth II. It came as a massive shock when the news was announced. In this issue we pay tribute to our Queen and our thoughts go to King Charles III following in our Queen's footsteps and condolences to King Charles III and all the royal family.

This month the clocks will go back in October. They will "Fall Back", by 1 hour on Sunday 30th October, "the end of summer", but an extra hour in bed or an extra hour to get on with just doing things.

Make the most of Autumn and all the changes that nature provides us with. Do not forget, Halloween will be upon us, why not try the TC Patisserie recipe for Pumpkin Soup, it is delicious. Helps you keep warm as well.

Whatever you decide to do, take a positive step, engage in change and look forward to good times ahead. Have a great October and keep the stories coming in.

Julian.

Boo! Happy October readers. It's spooky season!

Time for the falling of leaves from trees and the subsequent pleasing crunch or soggy squelch as we walk through them on the ground. I recently (and reluctantly) made the change from my summer wardrobe to my autumn wardrobe, and while I do love snuggling up in a cosy jumper it did pain me putting away the tank tops. Thank goodness for pumpkin lattes to get me in the new seasonal mood.

Don't forget the clocks go back at the end of the month - the extra hour might help you recover from those Halloween scares!

As always, stay safe and enjoy the issue.

Olivia.

THE LIONS NEED YOUR HELP

Preparations are moving forward for the Lions bonfire and firework display on November 5th on Beverley Westwood.

The two year break has resulted in regular contributors and helpers having finished or moved on so help in certain areas will be needed.

Timber for the bonfire will be required. It needs to be dropped off on site on the day of the bonfire and needs to be clean burning. It is not allowed to burn rubbish or old upholstery etc., old smashed and unwanted Pallets are ideal.

If any one can help with the supply of timber for the event please get in touch with Duncan Jack contact grocerjack@grocerjack.karoo.co.uk your help in this would be much appreciated.

The other problem arising is the emergence of our growingly cashless society so the Lions are in the process of setting up a Just Giving page to help fund this free to attend donation supported event. (Details to be announced soon.)

Alternatively please keep some cash back to bring for the bucket collection on the night.

The event cannot continue without your generous support. Any offers of help of any sort please contact Duncan at the email above.

LOCAL MOTOCROSS RIDER COMPETES AGAINST WORLD'S BEST IN SIX DAY ENDURO EVENT

East Yorkshire motocross rider Henry Harman has returned home after successfully competing for Team GB at this year's FIM International Six Days of Enduro Event (ISDE) in France.

Riding for the GB Midlands Club Team alongside Charlie Chater and Sam Davies, the 23 year old from North Cave was part of a 46 strong line up of Team GB riders backed by the Auto Cycle Union (ACU) who took part in the event at Le Puy-en-Velay between 29th August and 3rd September.

The punishing six day race provides a tough test for both rider and machine with the level of difficulty increasing as each day went by.

Harman said: "It was an incredibly tough and demanding six days of racing, but an amazing honour to represent Team GB at such a prestigious event. I'd like to say a massive thanks to my family and my support team for helping organise everything and for driving hundreds of miles each day to meet me at each of the checks and tests, and all the ACU British ISDE Team staff that helped me in the paddock.

"I will certainly carry the experience and knowledge I have gained from the competition and from racing against the best riders in the world forward with me."

GOD SAVE

On Thursday afternoon 8th September 2022 it was announced that Queen Elizabeth II had passed away peacefully with Prince Charles and Princess Anne at her side. Immediately, Prince Charles became King Charles III.

What happened over the following hours and days was amazing, something that we should all be proud of the way in which the procedure and protocol suddenly kicked into place.

From The Royal Family, Politicians, Military, Police, Security and event organisations including Media worldwide, it all just clicked. Straight away 'Operation Unicorn' was in place. Everyone knew what they had to do - a lesson for all of us.

In the space of a couple of days our country had witnessed the change of Prime Minister and the ruling monarch, something that will probably never happen again and a time in history which will remain with us for the rest of our lives.

The pouring of emotion and respect for the Queen has been there for all to see, with people laying flowers in respect, signing books of condolence and queuing for hours to see the Queen's coffin pass by or whilst lying in State at St Giles Cathedral in Edinburgh and at Westminster Hall in London, where millions of people paid tribute.

As everyone mourned the passing of the Queen, with the Proclamation taking place at St James Palace and the world watching for the first time, it was wonderful to observe and listen to the words of a past era, as the proclamation was read out. Our history and ancestry set before us to allow the continuity going forward.

Within hours Proclamations across the country were being organised.

Members of the public in Beverley witnessed an historical event on Sunday 11th September at 15.10 as they watched on as a procession of civic dignitaries and invited guests walked from The Guildhall along Toll Gavel to the Market Cross in Saturday Market Place, as would have happened hundreds of years ago, lead by a lone piper.

The Town Crier addressed the members of the public and announced the Lord Lieutenant of the East Riding of Yorkshire, Jim Dick, OBE to pay tribute to our Queen.

The High Sheriff of the East Riding of Yorkshire, Mrs Jacky Bowes read out the Proclamation to announce the accession of the new king, King Charles III, witnessed by the chairman of East Riding of Yorkshire Council, Councillor John Whittle and the town mayor of Beverley Councillor Linda Johnson.

The Reverend Jacki Tonkin said the prayers and a lone piper played the national anthem while the dignitaries and members of the public sang along and out loud before three cheers were given for King Charles III.

A member of the public said, "This was one of the most moving experiences she had ever witnessed, this day will remain in her memory, God save the King".

Other people mentioned how saddened they were at hearing of the Queen passing and how they have drawn comfort in writing messages of support in the books of condolences and how King Charles III had delivered on point such wonderful speeches and will continue to serve the country as his dear mother had done so faultlessly and selflessly for 70 years.

With millions of people from all over the world sending messages of tribute to the Queen and support to the new King, we all watched the funeral of "Our Queen" being laid to rest and a Royal period of mourning began.

Our country stands proud in its history and ancestry for all to admire.

"God Save The King".

FRAN DUNNING - SPIDER PHOBIA

Many businesses are seasonal and as a hypnotherapist, I'm no different. After Christmas and into the New Year there's a definite increase in people wanting to lose weight, embed those New Years Resolutions and give up smoking or alcohol.

The summer season brings a queue of people wanting to let go of their fear of flying/heights so they can jet off on holiday and now we're into the autumn season, there's been a distinct increase in wanting to overcome one particular phobia.

You may be wondering what have these celebrities got in common?

Well, there's a clue in a couple of the pictures as, ironically, Beyonce is dressed as Spiderwoman despite her fear of our eight legged creatures and it's understandable, given the size of some of the spider props in the Harry Potter films that Rupert Grint might be reluctant to reacquaint himself with the creatures.

Perhaps Derren Brown is the most surprising as anyone who has seen his amazing stage or TV shows will know, he is the master of managing behaviour but maybe next time he's in town, he could give me a call and we'll work on his arachnophobia.

A phobia is an unrealistic and overwhelming fear of something for reasons that may or may not make sense to the person who experiences the phobia. Logic doesn't usually play a role in the matter.

Native spiders in this country are harmless but the feedback from my clients is that at this time of year, as the morning mist rises and the temperatures drop, they start searching them out, putting conkers on the stairs and in corners of rooms and simply won't rest until any spider that has been detected has been removed from the house.

I was very conscious of these comments when I cleared out the shed and watched some pretty large spiders scuttle to the back of the shed and then moved the bags that they'd hidden behind and directed them out of the door - I don't like killing them!

I took the picture on the right of the spider that has been spinning its web for the last week outside my kitchen window - I'm completely indifferent to it. If you have a fear of spiders, how would it feel to simply not be bothered.

A few years ago a lady emailed me via my website saying she had a 60 year fear of spiders but she knew I could help as I'd worked with her brother-in-law who had never flown in an aeroplane at the time and he'd been to Australia twice since the two sessions we did. She came to visit me and on the second session I asked her how she was getting on. She said the ache in her shoulder had gone (hmmmm), I asked if there was anything else and she said she felt so much more relaxed and was sleeping like a log.

I prompted her directly about the spiders and she said dismissively, "oh, I'm not even looking for them". I smiled internally in the quiet knowledge that just one session had cured her 60 year phobia.

Please don't hesitate to contact me if you'd like to find out more about getting rid of those unwanted phobias and if you're curious about mindfulness, every Monday evening I run an online mindfulness session free of charge which offers a wonderful opportunity to take time out for yourself.

If you'd like to join, drop me a message/email or give me a call and I'll send the zoom link to you.

For more information and details on further techniques including hypnotherapy, visit www.francesdunning.com or contact me, Fran Dunning on 07973 819867.

I can support you to change your thinking and be that friend to talk to.

BEVERLEY AC - RUNNERS AND FUNDRAISERS

Many athletes take the opportunity to use their running to raise funds for local or national charities that have a special meaning for them.

The Club is proud to have Dove House Hospice as their nominated charity for this year, and fundraising from cake stalls at the Walkington 10kms and the annual Santa Run in December are but two events that have helped to raise much needed funds.

At the same time, members also use their running and training events to raise sponsorship for causes close to their hearts. The recent Great North Run saw 2 Beverley runners raising money for charity - Laura Egan running for Diabetes UK and Elaine Julien running for Pancreatic Cancer, whilst London marathon saw Matt Seymour running to raise money for FIND (Families for Individual Need and Dignity) an East Yorkshire based charity offering a diverse range of person centred support to young people with severe learning disabilities and/or autism, while Lucy Berriman's chosen charity was Children with Cancer.

Chris Peach is a club member who has raised money for Macmillan Cancer Support, in memory of his brother, and to help support a family friend, Rufus, as he grows up with Angelman's syndrome. Chris completed his fundraising challenge of cycling from Land's End to John O'Groats over 12 days in August, averaging between 80 and 100 miles per day.

However, we cannot just mention this huge physical challenge without mentioning what an enormous achievement it is personally for Chris who, 5 years ago, was involved in a cycling accident when he was hit by an HGV, when he was cycling home from work, resulting in 1 month's intensive care on a ventilator, a further month on a major trauma ward and then 2 months on a rehabilitation ward.

For most of us a broken back, arm, jaw, shoulder, and ribs plus other internal injuries would be enough to put us ever getting back on a bike, but Chris was not to be discouraged and got back in the saddle and back into his running shoes as soon as he could. Chris continues to run regularly with fellow members at Club training sessions and has made the most of his recovery to push himself to achieve incredible things just because he can. Chris has raised nearly £1700, smashing his target.

Meanwhile, Linda Wright is in training for her fundraising efforts which will see her running the Chester Ultra in March 2023. As part of her training and fundraising she is organizing and running the Georgian Quarter Marathon on Saturday 12th November, a 26.2-mile route on country roads around Beverley. Club members are invited to join her on this run.

Linda will be raising money to support various Stroke organisations following her husband Simon's stroke in December 2021.

Simon is making excellent progress with his recovery and has been hugely helped by various stroke services in East Yorkshire. Linda hopes that the fundraising she undertakes will help raise much needed funds to further develop and enhance help for the sufferers of Stroke and increase awareness of one of the biggest causes of disability in the UK.

My husband cycled on average 100 miles a week, wasn't overweight, didn't smoke but had relatively high blood pressure. He was lucky as he recognized the symptoms while his stroke was happening as did the people he was with. Would you have known?

It is important that we all know more, and I want to raise money to help fund organisations who raise awareness to help victims of Stroke. I have set up an on-line donations page at www.justgiving.com/crowdfunding/simon-wright-236.

If you are interested in becoming a member of the club, details on how to join can be found on the Club's website - www.beverleyathleticclub.co.uk

IN MY VIEW... THE THING WITH HALLOWEEN IS...

It's all about spooky movies and novelty snacks! Hello everyone. October is finally here and I love it. Autumn is my favourite season. The colours are beautiful, Knitwear is doable, the Pumpkin Spiced Latte reappears and, to top it all off, there is the promise of Halloween at the end of the month. I couldn't love it more if I tried.

So, with all that being said, I thought I would centre this issue around my love for John Carpenter movies!

He has done so many classics so I thought it would be fun to take some images, around Beverley, and edit them to represent several of his best known works.

I wanted to try to create the feel of some of his classics through different colour temperatures. Take Halloween for instance.

Even though the movie centres around a cold and sinister character, the overall look - particularly in the urban scenes early in the movie, is quite warm. This adds to the unease for me because it gives you a false sense of comfort and security. Cleverly, for a moment of relief. Christine is similar in terms of its cold feel. And it is based on a book by my favourite author - Stephen King! Perfect!

It's amazing what difference you can make to an image by adjusting the colour temperature.

I did these in Photoshop but it can be done just as easily on your phone.

Give it a try and, as always, the colour temperature cools as the story progresses, creating a gradual build in terror and suspense.

The Fog, on the other hand, has a cool, uneasy vibe right from the get go, never really allowing

I would love to see what you do.

So, whatever this time of year means to you, I hope you enjoy the season, and I hope that this issue inspires you not only to get out with your camera, but also to sit back and watch some classic horror movies. And don't forget a good helping of bat shaped crisps and a glass of a themed beer of some sort.

Happy Halloween, everyone, and in the words of the legend that is Elvira - unpleasant dreams...

HAVE SOME SKELE-FUN THIS HALLOWEEN

Trick or treat? Every year on October 31, Halloween is celebrated all over the world. It prevails as one of the oldest traditions in the world that celebrates the connection between the living and the dead.

Said to originate from the ancient Celtic festival of Samhain, the early notions of Halloween began as a festival where people would mainly light bonfires, offer sacrifices and stock up on supplies for the long winter. Many also believed at the Samhain rituals that there was a strong chance the spirit of someone who they wronged would also make an appearance. Spooky. From here came the first association with dressing up for Halloween, as people would dress up to scare away the ghosts.

Whether it's witches or clown, werewolves or skeletons and more, you can expect to see an abundance of fancy dress costumes when the modern day trick or treaters are at your door.

Trick or treating itself has been traced back to a Scottish custom popular in the 16th century known as 'guising', or an even earlier tradition of 'souling'. Rather than praying for the souls of their neighbours' recently departed, people would dress up in disguise and go door to door, singing songs and reciting poetry in exchange for food, or sometimes money.

In more recent years, the celebration of Halloween has seen a huge surge in popularity in the UK, with more fun activities being planned around the day each year. Look out for the spooktacular events in Beverley - if you dare!!!!

I'VE BEEN THINKING... SAYS COLIN RAYNOR

One of my favourite programmes on television (I think many of you will agree with me) is Countdown. For those of us who like programmes where words are there to make us use our minds and provide entertainment in contrast to the quizzes where the goal seems to revolve around monetary gain (there are exceptions) it shouldn't take even thirty seconds to reach that conclusion.

Countdown also has a lady by the name of Susie Dent and I confess to recording this programme so that I can, if I choose to, move it on until it reaches Dictionary Corner where this wizard of the English language explains why we have such a fascinating collection of words in our native tongue.

Although she could probably offer us a good reason for proving that English is not really our native tongue at all. Having set the scene in this tenth month of the year October (in the Roman calendar it was the eighth month but when the Gregorian calendar was devised it settled in to the tenth) I want to reflect on a word that is fast becoming part of our everyday lives and a very unwelcome one at that. I refer to the four letter word 'scam'.

Having had personal experience of the way in which a 'scam' can cause distress and make a person lose confidence in themselves and worry for a time, I have tried to see if I can work out where this word originated.

Not having a fraction of the talent of the wordsmith from Countdown it did come as a bit of a surprise to find that this four letter word has a very similar meaning to a word I heard often in my younger days. I refer to the word 'scamp'.

I well remember been called 'a young scamp' when I had done something that one or other of my parents disapproved of. So the current four letter word is just carrying on the tradition of a bad habit but perhaps with more serious repercussions than I ever suffered.

The other attraction of Countdown of course is for folks who are good with numbers if not with words, which does not include me. Again, against the clock, I marvel that the contestants can achieve the required number and sometimes in different ways.

Of course if neither is able to do the 'sums' the ever reliable Rachel will show how it is done. I have heard it said that if you were good with numbers in your younger days you never lose the skill.

So, although your physical body may be limiting your movement make sure your brain is still capable of doing what you ask of it. But don't be too disappointed if you are not able to reach the required figure. It is only a game remember.

Which of course brings us to the ultimate attraction of Countdown, the conundrum in which even the audience have occasionally been asked to give the answer.

So I will leave you this time with a conundrum and give you the clue that there are just three eleven letter words included in the prose this month but which one is this?

THE BRITISH MONARCHY WILL SUSTAIN

Whether you met Her Late Majesty, Queen Elizabeth II in person or not, it seems everyone has a story to tell.

My first time was when working in London in 2004, on a day off. I went for a tourist walkabout and it was the flashing lights of outriders that first caught my attention. Her Majesty's Bentley Limousine slowly glided past and, in her finest regalia wearing a sparkling tiara, she happened to look my way as she waved to passers-by. Next to me was a married couple from the USA who gasped. "Oh wow, that really was the Queen, wasn't it?" asked the woman to anyone listening. "That was the Queen alright, or 'The Boss' as I like to call her," I told the woman.

"Is 'the boss' a nickname you Brits have for her?" asked the man.

"Long before you lot had Bruce Springsteen, the real boss has always been the Queen, at least to ex-military types like me," I said. The couple laughed. I continued, "Having worked for her, you may have noticed that when she looked our way, she subtly nodded at me." I was joking, but the couple took it seriously. Taken by the moment, the woman excitedly grabbed her husband and said, "Do you know honey, I think I did see her nod. She turned to me. "May I ask, who you are sir?"

"These days, I'm what's known as a town crier and in my role, two or three times a week I shout God save the Queen."

"No way," exclaimed the man.

"Yes, way," I said.

"A real town crier... like one of those 'hear ye, hear ye' characters?" asked the woman.

"That's the one. Check out my website and you will see a photo of Her Majesty and me." (I am actually with a royal lookalike.)

"Wait till we tell the folks back home we rubbed shoulders with someone from the palace who knows the Queen. You've made our visit," said the woman.

I didn't want to disappoint them so I didn't correct the situation as she understood it to be. Besides, I had in fact worked in a London based palace. This was when I gave a shout out for a friend's birthday party at the Phoenix Palace (near Madame Tussauds), which is a Chinese restaurant.

The second time I saw HM was closer to home in 2009 when I nipped out to my local newsagent in Willerby Square and, suddenly, the famous Bentley passed by again. Her vehicle had slowed down to negotiate the Willerby village roundabout and she nudged Prince Phillip to look at the grand clock tower that sits central in it. She wore a striking day-glow yellow hat and matching scarf. The royal couple were heading to Hull after opening a £67m Oncology and Haematology Centre at Castle Hill Hospital.

My third sighting was through an invite to Buckingham Palace in 2012, when I saw not only HM, but the whole of the royal family. My wife and I had won tickets to attend The Party at the Palace Concert celebrating her Diamond Jubilee. We were sat only several rows in front of the whole royal entourage.

Together we all tapped our feet and clapped our hands to the likes of Kylie Minogue and Robbie Williams caterwauling and energetically shaking their booties on the stage. The Queen enigmatically smiled through it all.

But on a more serious note, and to briefly try and answer the question: "Why do we have royalty, not a republic?" In Hull and the East Riding, it would appear we are mostly loyal royals, judging by the amazing turnout for the recent reading of the Proclamation for the Ascension of a new King, especially in Beverley which was outstanding and very moving. It should be remembered that in our constitutional monarchy a king or queen does not rule, they reign. And whether at a state occasion or an informal walkabout, part of their royal duty is to act as our nation's foremost ceremonial representative, meeting and greeting. The ultimate meeter and greeter, without doubt, has been The Queen, who had golden-ticket, box-office appeal. Behind her lovely smile, she was inscrutable, not cynical and non-tribal. And politicians might also take note that when she made a promise, she kept it. She could tap a mean spoon to a rock beat as well.

I served for 22 years in the army and though I had the occasional misstep in my size-12 boots, I somehow managed to get a long service and good conduct medal. The Queen, a remarkable woman and grafter, served for 70 long years and, in her dainty town or country footwear, she didn't put a foot wrong. However, whilst the duty of service that The Queen gave is deserving of great recognition, she earned something far more important, worthy and lasting than adornments or titles - what The Queen earned was the love and respect of not just her people, but the whole world.

After leaving the military and working for 25 years as a town crier, countless times at the end of my announcements I declared, "God save the Queen." On first hearing through the media, "The Queen is dead, long live the King", whilst it has historical oratory precedent, how blunt and brutal it sounded. We have since mourned and marked her passing through spectacular pageantry and procession. Sadly, no more will we see her famous wave. But life inexorably moves on and we are now living in the Carolean era when I will be equally proud to cry out: "God save the King."

Michael Wood.

FIVE WAYS TO STOP INFLATION HALTING YOUR BUSINESS GROWTH

Soaring inflation is hitting many companies hard, but there are ways to mitigate its effects. Seek advice if you need help dealing with inflation.

UK inflation is rising at its fastest rate in 40 years. It can be a worrying time if you own a business, particularly with news that most analysts believe the situation will get worse before it improves. Indeed, the Bank of England expects inflation to reach above 11% by the end of the year.¹ The impact on your company can be profound, from increasing supply-chain costs to demands from staff for higher wages. In such a scenario, it's important to be able to answer some key questions about rising prices, such as: how does inflation affect businesses and how do you deal with rising inflation? Here are five ways to stop inflation halting your business growth and reduce the impact of spiralling prices.

Prepare the business for a tough time

We're in a period of inflation not seen for more than four decades and it's likely to get worse over the coming months. This is probably the last thing any business needs after coming through COVID-19, but it's vital you face up to the realities of the situation. "Brace yourself and your teams for turbulence ahead by reducing any inefficiency still present in your production and delivery lines," advises Professor Marco Mongiello, Pro Vice-Chancellor at The University of Law Business School. "Involve the team in understanding that everyone will have to play their part. That could mean that any salary increases may have to wait a little bit, although not long enough to compromise the livelihood of your employees."

Reduce working capital

"Seek to fix prices with your suppliers for a longer period of time and/or try to negotiate longer payment terms," adds Professor Mongiello. "When inflation is rife, paying the same nominal amount of money later means paying a smaller real value. Longer payment terms will also help reduce the cost of servicing your debt, with interest likely to increase in the coming weeks and months." It also pays to invest any cash you have available rather than delay decisions on where to spend it because the longer you wait, the less value that cash will have. "Speed up your decision process and spend it now, before the cost goes up even further," says Professor Mongiello. "If you don't have cash available, seek to switch your short-term variable debt into longer-term debt facilities at fixed rates."

Think about investing

It might seem counterintuitive, but spending money can actually help you beat inflation, especially if it makes your organisation more efficient. "Technology investment in the form of artificial intelligence or business software can often take care of certain parts of your company," says Peter Bookah, a business consultant with more than 30 years' experience helping SMEs to scale up and grow. "This frees up other areas such as business development or cash flow, which can be spent in other ways to counteract rising costs. Outsourcing can also free up time and money within an organisation."

Be honest with your customers

Given what happens to business costs when inflation rises, it's likely that you'll have to increase prices to cover at least some of the impact. Always try to be understanding of customers' situations, while being firm in your reasons for needing to increase prices. "Try to involve your customers by empathising with their own struggle to cope with increasing costs and by doing so, seek to strengthen their loyalty," says Professor Mongiello. "Avoid begging for forgiveness for having had to increase your prices. Instead, you could indicate that your prices rose by less than those of selected competitors - only if that's true, of course."

Keep marketing

Businesses will often cut back on marketing when the economy is struggling, but Peter believes this is a false economy. "I always advise companies to continue with a marketing strategy, even if it's slightly revised," he says. "Marketing is a major way of propelling your business forward and growing your service users or customer base. In a tough market, where you may be losing customers because of the cost-of-living crisis or supply-chain problems, it's important to communicate with them and be visible and clear with the service you're offering."

REST UP... THE CLOCKS ARE GOING BACK

Well the weather just got colder and the nights are pulling in, which means October is officially here to mark the end of British Summer Time for this year. There is one perk though - at least we get an extra hour in bed.

The clocks go back on the last Sunday of October every year, which means the UK will be on Greenwich Mean Time (GMT). This year the clocks go back one day before Halloween on October 30.

Before the clocks go back later this month, the UK is running on British Summer Time (BST). This lasts from when we move the clocks forwards at the end of March until 2am this October when we move to GMT.

The clocks are moved backwards and forward an hour each year so we can make ultimate use of the best natural light while the earth orbits the sun. Controlling daylight hours during the working day was also brought in to save use of energy.

The time will automatically change on devices such as smartphones and laptops, but clocks on ovens, cars, wall clocks and watches will need changing manually.

The simple pleasure of an extra hour in bed will come at a cost, however, with nights getting darker even earlier and more quickly. Before we know it it will be time for the dreaded C-word... Christmas!

T C PATISSERIE - PUMPKIN SOUP RECIPE

This is the soup recipe we use at T C Patisserie, we don't usually put spices in, as we love the pumpkin flavour, but can be added depending on your taste!

- 1 whole pumpkin
- 3 onions
- Water to fully cover (or stock)
- Salt & pepper
- Dash of cream (optional)
- Added mixed spice to taste (optional)

1. Chop pumpkin into quarters, peel, deseed and chop flesh into rough chunks.

2. Cut onions roughly, put a large pan and fry with a little oil, then add the pumpkin, fry together for a minute or two, then cover with water.

Leave to boil until pumpkin is soft and water has reduced, then blend the mix with a hand blender.

If the blended mixture is too thin, leave to boil and reduce further. When it is a thick consistency, remove from the heat, season to taste and add a dash of cream.

3. Your soup is now ready to serve. Any extra can be portioned, left in the fridge for a couple of days or even frozen.

Enjoy!!

SHORT STORY BY CLINT WASTLING - WHITE GLOVES

It was all a bit prescriptive but I knew that if I didn't follow the rules of etiquette I wouldn't be introduced to the Queen. As the only female engineering geologist working on the Humber Bridge, I wasn't about to let my boss take all the credit! I put on my one and only suit (which I last wore for my sister's wedding five years ago) and set off for the bridge. Thankfully, my old yellow Astra started first time. I sang along to a New Romantics compilation tape.

At the traffic lights I glanced at the invitation that I'd thrown onto the passenger seat. Friday 17th July 1981 - check; hat - check; gloves... I breathed deeply and fought off the urge to panic. There must be a shop which sells women's white gloves somewhere in Beverley.

I parked on Saturday Market and popped into several boutiques. Each time the answer was no! No white gloves, try such and such... and I did. I kept checking the time anxious that I was going to be late. I'd read the instructions, it was quite clear late-comers would not be admitted for security reasons. I hurried down Toll Gavel and into yet another boutique. "I've just sold the last pair to a classy lady." Needless to say by this time I was close to tears. "Why not try Boots?" The shop assistant whispered, "They sell cotton surgical gloves in the chemists and no one will be able to tell any difference and they're so much cheaper!"

"Thanks!" I said as I dashed out of the shop and into the chemists. An assistant helped me find the gloves and I managed to get back to the car just before it started raining. By the time I'd got onto Great Gutter Lane I knew I'd be ok on time. After parking up, I presented my pass, went through security and thankfully found my manager.

"You scrub up well," he said. "I was beginning to think you wouldn't get here."

"White gloves!" I waved them in the air before pulling them on. "I had to buy some and it took ages."

Not my usual attire, I always wear safety equipment and a hard hat on site. My role supervising the positioning of the south towers of the Humber Bridge had started badly. My former professor and I were both of the opinion that there was no chalk bedrock for firm foundations at the proposed site and we were right. The work was well and truly bogged down by all the extra concrete required to make the towers safe. I wondered whether the Queen knew anything of this technical problem in building the world's longest suspension bridge.

HRH arrived in a black Rolls Royce, followed by her entourage. Cheers resounded as The Queen and Prince Philip began their visit. Firstly, they inspected the guard of honour then walked over to our line. As the Queen got closer, I felt my knees tremble with nerves. I heard my name and curtsied. The Queen paused, held out her hand, which I accepted gracefully. Thankfully she didn't notice my surgical gloves or if she did, she was too polite to say anything.

"Men never listen to us." She said smiling. I immediately knew that she had read about the difficulties of building this great suspension bridge and my manager realised that she had too as he was crimson with embarrassment.

HRH moved down the line and my nerves dissipated. I was able to see how beautifully she was clothed in a lemon dress suit, matching hat and those famous white Cornelia James gloves!

Clint is providing poetry workshops for the Staithes Weekender on Saturday 29th October. He'll also be reading from Layers, his poetry collection.

POEM BY PAULINE KIRK - RAINBOW

Rainbow on a minster roof
where do you end?
Is your gold under passing cars or buried in paving stone?
Rapunzled in my city tower
I watch streets dissolve and slide, and gutters become a mountain stream.
Beyond a grove of chimney,
the sky blurs like ink in water,
but shop windows flap butterfly wings.
You colour me a spectrum of joy, though sad church bells ring.
I recall a woman who was more than Queen: inspirer, encourager, stateswoman and mother, example of a life of service, well lived.

The colours fade
but the promise remains:
of sun and hope and a new era.

Pauline Kirk is a widely published poet and novelist. Writing as P J Quinn, Pauline is working on the fifth D I Ambrose Mystery, due out next year with Stairwell Books. More information can be found at: www.paulinemkirk.co.uk

WALKING HIGH AND LOW: FROM NORTH NEWBALD

Hopefully, we still have some fine days to come this year, after an exceptional summer. I certainly enjoyed one in mid-September to complete this splendid, if quite strenuous, 9 mile circular based on the beautiful village of North Newbald.

This walk showcases some of the most varied landscapes in the Riding, with dense woodland, 2 sublime dry valleys and sweeping wolds, offering ever-changing views.

1 Newbald can be reached on the quiet road that leaves Beverley via the Westwood. Sadly the bus service is too limited to make it a viable option for a long walk. Park, with due consideration for residents, on Townside or Galegate. Begin your walk at the signed track that heads uphill from the middle of Townside. The route is clear as we head north, with fine views over woodland towards York to our west, and across rippling wolds to the east.

2 In just under a mile, the path heads right at Syke House farm, up the pronounced dry valley. The path rises steadily, here I saw masses of potatoes, washed out of the ground by a flash flood from a rare late summer downpour.

3 You now reach the junction with the Wolds Way at Hessleskaw Gate. Our route goes left, but if you want a short cut back to Newbald, head right.

4 In 200 yards you reach a quiet road. Go right, passing farm buildings. In less than a mile, you reach a signed chalk track on your left that heads steeply down towards Sancton.

5 This is a really splendid and little known Wolds valley. Notably varied, you even pass a recently planted vineyard, evidence of a warming climate. The lower part of the valley is beautifully wooded, full of early autumn berries when I passed by.

6 You enter the village of Sancton just over the A1034 from the church. Cross with care to view this excellent building on a prominent mound, and with a very unusual octagonal tower. Sadly, it is not normally open to explore. A short distance down the main road, take the lane right by the village pond, passing some nice building and the pub - unless this is open!

7 This pleasant and quiet road soon passes through the grounds of the handsome Houghton Hall, a short detour allows you to see this fine Georgian buildings across its splendid park. Our route heads left towards the woodland on a clear path. I think this is the most extensive wooded area in the Riding, lovely to stroll through.

8 After a mile, at a clear junction, go left to continue through the woods passing a secluded cottage. The path becomes a track and then a metalled road, as it rises gently back to Newbald.

9 Again cross the main road with care. Leave some time to explore this smashing village with its distinctive mellow stone buildings, made from locally quarried limestone, some of which was used on the oldest parts of Beverley Minster.

The Norman church is so outstanding inside and out. If locked, you can usually collect a key from named properties nearby to access. The village has two pubs too, so you might want to end your day with well-earned refreshments.

CARFAN - THE TRIUMPH TR3A

The subject of this month's issue is a Triumph TR3A, manufactured in 1959, having been totally restored five years ago and it certainly shows as it is immaculate and a credit to its fortunate owner.

An interesting point of this particular model is that it was the first car to feature front disc brakes, something we all take for granted today without giving it a second thought. The engine is 2 litres and only about 800 miles a year are added to its odometer which probably contributes to its pristine appearance.

Produced between 1957 and 1962, the TR3A was a sales success with the majority of the 58,000 made making their way over the Atlantic ocean to America where the lack of the dreaded salt has contributed to their longevity. Because of their good handling capability, a lot of TR3s, not just this version, were used in motorsports such as hillclimbs and rallying, both at home and abroad with some success.

Surprisingly enough for a car of this age, spare parts are easy to obtain, which was just as well for the current owner when the release bearing went just two thousand miles after the restoration, necessitating the removal of both the gear box and the seats to aid accessibility.

Another surprise is that if you fancy a TR3A on your drive there are quite a lot available to purchase, the only decision is how much you want to work on them - total restoration projects are available from around £2000 if you have lots of time to spare right up to £40,000 if you would like the pleasure of a pristine example, so the choice is yours.

So don't forget, should you see this immaculate beauty on your travels, don't forget that Cheery Carfan wave!

SAILING - EXPLORING NEW PLACES IN NEW WAYS

Independent sailing holidays are on increase allowing people to explore places in new ways.

It goes without saying that either on a cruise ship or on a smaller vessel such as a yacht or a catamaran, you have the opportunity to see several different places on one holiday. The beauty of the sailing holiday is that it is a more intimate experience as you are very much in close proximity to others on the yacht so it lends itself to small sociable groups of clients.

I have recently booked this type of holiday for a group of friends travelling together to celebrate a significant milestone birthday. It also has the unique opportunity that whilst you know which port you embark and disembark from you can actually design your own itinerary - with recommendations from the skipper who knows their area very well and is able to recommend some wonderful bays to moor at.

Given the fact that the size of the yacht or catamaran in relation to a cruise liner is so small you will actually experience some stunning inlets and bays that would not be possible on a cruise line. So you would not have the swimming pool or the west end shows of a cruise ship, however you will have a very unique and private experience and would be able to enjoy some remarkable restaurants throughout the itinerary.

If you like your activities you can do what you want when you want, whether that would be simply relax, read or swim in the ocean. On board, learn the skills of being a sailor, and perhaps try your hand on kayaks or paddle boards. You could arrange your schedule to include some activities from the destinations you visit, the flexibility is all yours.

In terms of the destinations available to you for Europe it is primarily Croatia, Greece and Italy, however it is a popular experience amongst the islands of the Caribbean. A very relaxed holiday, and certainly a sociable holiday, with an opportunity to see places you would not see on a land based or cruise based holiday.

My clients have certainly thoroughly enjoyed their experience and surpassed their expectations. Take the opportunity to "Sail and Explore".

COUNTRYSIDE MATTERS WITH SAM WALTON

I have a friend in Australia who is quite a character, he tells it exactly the way it is and does not pull any punches. He farms 8,500 acres and has a 500 sow unit. His son does the arable with the help of one man whilst his son in law runs the pig unit.

filling up again to which he replied in about a couple of hours when I have done another 100 acres! I give up!

I have never met a man like him, and many years ago, when he could not get a tractor big enough, he actually built one himself which is now in a museum somewhere. Because of the large pig herd, he obviously has a lot of slurry which is invaluable to him for the arable land so again he could not get a slurry tanker big enough, so he bought an old brewery wagon which he converted into a slurry tanker which he pulls with his large Caterpillar tractor.

When they are drilling the corn, their employee works the tractor for 12 hours during the day and his son does the night shift. When I arrived he asked if I would like to see the drill at work so we went four miles to where the cloud of dust could be seen and he called up the driver and asked him when he would be

IN THE GARDEN... OCTOBER

October is a mixed bag as far as the weather is concerned bringing rain, wind (yes, I can remember THAT October!) and cloud. We can also experience still, crisp days bringing our first frosts of the winter - autumn is well and truly here.

As a result everything in the garden starts to slow down and lose the vibrancy of summer, which is not to say there is no colour in the garden, consider the rich hues of foliage displayed on shrubs and trees not forgetting fruits and berries.

Although things in the garden are slowing down it does not mean there is no work to be done, we just have less time to complete the tasks. Evenings are shorter and so for most people the work must be squeezed into the weekends. Most of the tasks are associated with harvesting the final crops from summer, generally tidying up and getting prepared for the winter and next year.

October is the latest month when attending to the lawn is sensible, I am guessing there were a lot of people wondering what to do with their beleaguered lawns this summer. Some may still have brown patches and tufty patches of green on them, others may have recovered well.

Lawns in October

- October is an ideal month for laying new turf - this will give you an instant green lawn as opposed to seeding, BUT preparation of the soil before the turves are laid is key and its hard work!
- Scarify established lawns with a rake, then aerate with a fork.
- Top dress established lawns and apply an autumn 'weed and feed', this has a slightly different balance of elements to the spring lawn feeds, encouraging strong root and grass growth next spring.
- Remove fallen leaves - if they are allowed to build up bare patches will appear.
- Continue to mow existing lawns with the blades set at their highest.

Harvesting in October

- Bring in tender perennials, trim and store in a frost-free place.
- Harvest apples and pears - before they fall and get damaged or 'nibbled' by various beasts.
- Dig up carrots, potatoes, and other root crops.

Tidying in October

- Rake up fallen leaves and clear up in the garden (any diseased leaves should be burnt not composted).
- Dig over any empty areas of soil - but not if too wet.

Getting Prepared

- Plant up containers with bulbs and winter bedding.
- Plant bulbs in the garden.
- Put Glue Bands on fruit trees - these set in place a sticky barrier which stops female moths climbing the tree to mate and lay their eggs, and other pests from hibernating in cracks in the bark.
- This is also a good time of year to plant new shrubs and perennials. The warmth in the soil will help them to get quickly established.
- At the end of the month remove any pumps and filters from the pond, clean them out and store until spring.

That's about it for this month,

Happy gardening. J.

EAST RIDING THEATRE PRESENTS GLADYS: A BEVERLEY LOVE STORY

ERT's Autumn production, Gladys: A Beverley Love Story is now showing at the theatre until Saturday 22nd October.

Written by Jane McLauchlan, this slice-of-life drama follows Gladys who has been married to her dependable husband Alfie for 45 years. Their only child has long since fled the nest. What remains for them except cheese rolls at the local café and the daily crossword?

Adrian Rawlins, Artistic Director of the theatre, tells us why he chose this play: 'It's such a heart-warming and poignant play about love, friendship and support - and finding hope in places we wouldn't expect. I think it's a play that everyone can relate to and there's real humour in the characters' observations about the minutiae of everyday life.'

Gladys stars Jacky Naylor (Coronation Street, Brassed Off), Andrew Dunn (Dinnerladies, The Syndicate) and Candida Gubbins (Salisbury, War and Peace).

Director Mike Friend concludes, 'We have a fantastic cast and I hope Jane's play reminds you of characters in your own life. If the play says one thing, it is that even the most ordinary life is remarkable.'

Gladys: A Beverley Love Story runs until Saturday 22nd October.

Tickets are £18.50 (£17.50 Conc. & £14 under 23s) - on sale now and available from: www.eastridingtheatre.co.uk
